

Going to the Providence Performing Art Center Parking in the City

We are going to the Providence Performing Arts Center. We can travel by car, bus or taxi to get there.

We can get dropped off in front of the theatre.

We might park in a parking garage.

The parking garage has lights like a tunnel. If I get scared, I can hold an adults hand.

We may also park on the street. An adult may need to put money in the meter.

Sometimes we have to walk a short distance to the theatre.
I can use the crosswalk and watch for cars to be safe.

When you see this sign, you are at the Providence Performing Art Center.
